“Prison Abolition? The Uses and Abuses of Incarceration,” will discuss prison abolition as a social movement ideal and will critically engage with Angela Davis’s work on the “prison industrial complex.”

Wednesday, October 25
5 p.m.
University of Pittsburgh School of Law
Barco Law Building
Teplitz Memorial Moot Courtroom
3900 Forbes Avenue
Pittsburgh, PA 15260

This lecture is free and open to the public.

Sponsored by The University of Pittsburgh’s School of Law, Department of Philosophy, and Humanities Center

Learn more at humcenter.pitt.edu/events

Tommie Shelby is the Caldwell Titcomb Professor in the Department of African and African American Studies and the Department of Philosophy at Harvard University. He earned a Ph.D. in Philosophy and a Certificate in Cultural Studies from the University of Pittsburgh, and a B.A. in Philosophy from Florida A & M University.

Shelby is the author of Dark Ghettos: Injustice, Dissent, and Reform, recipient of the 2016 Book Award from the North American Society for Social Philosophy. His research and teaching interests include social and political philosophy, Africana philosophy, philosophy of law, critical philosophy of race, history of black political thought, and philosophy of social science.

An interdisciplinary conference on Dark Ghettos: Injustice, Dissent, and Reform, with Shelby responding to talks by scholars in law, philosophy, sociology, and anthropology, will be held on October 26 and 27.